

Catherine Yang
Regional Managing Director
Grundfos China

Catherine Yang is the Regional Managing Director of Grundfos China. Based in Shanghai, Catherine is responsible for Grundfos China's extensive footprint with 22 offices, two wholly-owned sales companies, four production plants and an innovation centre in China. She also spearheads Grundfos China business to drive sustainable growth and development in the market.

Catherine joins Grundfos from her previous position as the Managing Director of Carrier Commercial Refrigeration Asia, at United Technologies Corporation (UTC) where she led its commercial refrigeration business in Asia with operations in many countries and regions, including Greater China.

With a strong background in sales, service, research and development, and operations, Catherine has rich experiences in developing long term partnerships with Chinese partners and in building strong business relationships with large appliances and Heating, Ventilation, and Air Conditioning (HVAC) companies in China.

Prior to her role at UTC, Catherine was an investment banker at UBS in New York, where she advised corporate clients on corporate finance strategies and executed M&A and financing transactions.

Catherine is effectively bilingual and comes with over 22 years of working experience, including 13 years in China, eight in the United States, and one in the United Kingdom.

Catherine holds a bachelor's degree in computer sciences from the University of Texas at Austin and a master's degree in information networking from Carnegie Mellon University. She also holds an MBA degree from the Wharton School at the University of Pennsylvania.